Stricte in Jeran.—A enrious illustration of the curious fushions of Jupan is Scutaro, lately in command of the Japanese garrison of Yokohama, and, it would appear, a young man considerable in advance of his fellows in intelligence. It seems that he had trained a body of about 1,200 troops on the European pian, hist having translated the British drill-book, and for this, although permission had been given, in another instance, he was degraded without warning, his house given up to loot, and his property confiscated. The unfortunate mun attempted to commit harriskari. Lut was prevented by his friends; and the Givernment, indignant that he should try to commit suicide without permission, ordered him to be beheaded. ADDRESS OF GENERAL BRANGER.

MR. PHERIDENT. As chairman of a committee appented by the convention assembled at Cleveland. Ohio, on the 17th inst. I have the honor to lay before you record of its proceedings. The object of our envention, sir, formed as it was our process address who has a presented as the support of the proceedings. our caven on, sr, formed as it was of patrotic sold re and salers who had a loght sold restoration of the Union, was to assist in devising means for the carly restoration of cantidence, unity, good will, and cordality to all sections of our distracted country. We believe these opers with the true theory of our Govern our distracted country. We believe these of icts wil he soonest attained in accordance with the true theory of our Government when the measures propositions full to secure that, will full to secure that, will full to secure the great just for which the soldiers of the Union army and the salors of the Union navy fugit, viz a true and perpetual Union. a Union not alone in theory, but a Union in fait, based upon our great Magna Cha la the Constitution. The men who assem led at Cleveland were more whose ly valty and love of country were ted on every batte-field of the republic during the late insurrection. They were inspired by no other motive or am in except the national welfare. They met in the same spirit, were animated by the same impulses, and giverned by the same motives with actuated and controlled them on the field. When the war ceased they fouldy hiped that their duties were over; but the present inhappy condition of public affairs, in their judgment rendered it necessary that they should meet together for the purpose of promoting and establishing a spirit of peace, harmony, fraternity, and true lysity th oughont the entire Union. Thus they met, and the result of their deliberations is summed up in the following resolutions. erat ons is summed up in the following in the present posture of our pulle affairs. To receive the enconragem nt and confidence of gentlemen so intelligent and patriote inspires me with new and increased courage to persevere in the discharge of my dity in strictly adhering to and maintaining the Constitution of the country. You have preformed your part in the field your gallant achievements have become a part of the history of the country, but have a done that there is, as you have just exinced by your recent a tion, an equal y important duty to perform as citizens. I repeat it, that the part that you have so lately discharged with somuch credit to yours lives, as solders and sailors of the Union. While, in one sense, the context through which we have so successfully passed was a physical one, connected, of conrec, with intellect so far as the science of war is concerned, that through which we have so successfully passed was a physical one, connected, of conrec, with intellect so far as the science of war is concerned, that through which we have so successfully passed was a physical one, connected, of conrec, with intellect so far as the science of war is concerned, that through which we are now passing pertains exclusively to the administration of the civil departm nt of our Government, which forms the only basis upon which our tatitutions are to last forever. And the query which now comes up, and a very serious one it is, is whether the Covernment are to be subverted, or the dead of Mrs. Aulick, wife of Commin the Constitution of our country.

That our object in taking up arms to suppress the late rebellion was to defind and maintain the supremacy of the Con-stitution and preserve the Union with all merous home engagements will prevent.

whether the character, nat re, and genius of the Government are to be subverted, or whether the Government is to settie down upon the basis and principles laid down in the Constitution of our country.

The part which I have borne since this rebellion, or civil war, commenced is known to all of you and I must beg to refer you to that as evidence and proof of what my course and conduct will be in the future. I have been co-operating with you have been engaged since the civil contest commence i, but I think we have now reached the most important crisis of our country's history, and that Is to determine and fix upon which the institutions of the countries of the co

We have a written Censtitution, and that is a boundary both autional and State, and it is necessary that these boundaries should be observed and strictly carried out, if free government is to exist. Coming out of a great rebellion we ought to demonstrate to mankind that a Government cannot exist upon hate, distrust, and ill-will, the one for the other, and that time has now come for reconciliation, the renewnl of confidence, the one in the other, and the restoration of the relations of the States with the Federal Government, which I look upon as being as in portant, if not the more important part of the work in which we have been en aged for the last four or five Chandler vs. Cellins, Taylor, cross nppeal granted uppellee.

peculiarly acceptable to me, and, God being willing, with your help 1 shall pusue the course I have been parsing in trying to save and restore the Governnent.

It has be it said y some that the founders of government are utitled to the most conspicuous place, at my conviction is that the preservers of the government occupy an equally, if not n more, important pace; and though none of us fived at the time this Government was founded, we are living in a more important tim—when it is to be preserved. Let us all, then, cheerfully and zealously perform our part in this great work according to the Constitution and goings of our Government, and the result will be the preservation of the Government, and we will take our places where history may assign us.

I thank you, gentlemen, for the cordiality and confidence you have indicated.
